This was my family's seventh MCT production and we have all loved every one. On Saturday night as I tucked her into bed after a very exciting day, my almost-18-year-old was in tears at the thought that this could be her last "Missoula week" - almost enough to make a kid not want to graduate and go on to university. Many thanks from all of us for many wonderful memories.

Lisa and Schuyler were extremely professional and focused in directing our students. For their age, they demonstrated amazing professionalism and expertise. Their enthusiasm and love of theatre are contagious and they gave our students an experience they will always remember. These two young people have "awesome" talent and were highly regarded by the hosts, students, and community. We were really sad to say goodbye to our two new "friends". Lisa and Schuyler are excellent representatives/ambassadors for your company. Thanks!

The beauty of the way they cast the students is that they come to our school with a clean slate and select our students without any prior prejudices. As a result, students who often do not succeed in the school situation are given an opportunity to excel. My own children missed them (Tour Actor/Directors) after they left and the following two weeks were a little like the emptiness one feels after Christmas—it was such an emotional high and such a great experience that you never want it to end.

We look forward to hosting MCT every year. Our pianist is almost more excited than the students! Can hardly wait for next year!

The cost for the residency is tough for us, but we do appreciate the value we are receiving. We are trying to come up with other funding. We have tried a cheaper Canadian version, but were not satisfied—there was no comparison to the level of professionalism that we receive with MCT.

Watching special needs children try-out was magic! They took risks and participated with peers and it helped their self-esteem and sense of belonging. An elementary student that has special needs was one of the better knights - and his relationship with peers has been improved because of his participation in the program.
